

All the old histories of Hampstead are full of the long-lived Scottish Baillie family. Joanna, a poet, also won fame from 1798 with her Plays of the Passion and her home (Bolton House) in Windmill Hill was visited by Scott, Byron, Wordsworth and other great literati. A plaque to her was erected here in 1900.

