

Streets of West Hampstead:

p. 16. Family of sculptors. Shelley, referring to Leigh Hunt's studio:

'..... no doubt
Is still adorned with many a cast by Shout.'

(The sketch is a simple line drawing of a hexagonal object, possibly a table or a piece of furniture, with a central hexagonal opening and several legs or supports extending downwards. The drawing is done in pencil or light ink on a textured paper background.)

(The sketch is a simple line drawing of a hexagonal object, possibly a table or a piece of furniture, with a central hexagonal opening and several legs or supports extending downwards. The drawing is done in pencil or light ink on a textured paper background.)

The sketch is a simple line drawing of a hexagonal object, possibly a table or a piece of furniture, with a central hexagonal opening and several legs or supports extending downwards. The drawing is done in pencil or light ink on a textured paper background.

The sketch is a simple line drawing of a hexagonal object, possibly a table or a piece of furniture, with a central hexagonal opening and several legs or supports extending downwards. The drawing is done in pencil or light ink on a textured paper background.